The secret life of six-year-olds online

Six-year-olds today are as digitally advanced as 10-year-olds were just three years ago, new research shows.

Parental supervision

The number of parents saying they are always present to supervise their child aged six when they are online, using computer devices, has gone down in the last three years from 55% to 43%.

Research of 1,500 parents of children using the internet between age 6 and 16 in 2013 and September 2016, carried out by Opinion Leader.